

Materials from the Researcher-Practitioner Partnership Study

The National Institute of Justice-funded Researcher-Practitioner Partnership Study produced a number of guides, summaries, and tip sheets designed for a variety of audiences, including researchers, practitioners, and state administering agencies. While the study focused on partnerships with criminal justice practitioners, the findings and resources are relevant to other practitioners as well.

For researchers and practitioners:

Highlights and Lowlights of Researcher-Practitioner Collaborations in the Criminal Justice System, Findings from the Researcher- Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Tiara C. Willie, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243914.pdf>

Guidelines for Successful Researcher-Practitioner Partnerships in the Criminal Justice System, Findings from the Researcher- Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P Sullivan, Tara McPartland, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243918.pdf>

How Researchers Can Develop Successful Relationships with Criminal Justice Practitioners: Findings from the Researcher- Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Enna Khondkaryan, Lauren Moss-Racusin, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243912.pdf>

This 7-page brief for researchers provides recommendations on how to collaborate successfully with criminal justice system practitioners. These recommendations resulted from a series of interviews and focus groups with researchers and criminal justice system practitioners from the United States and Canada who have collaborated successfully.

Recommendations for Collaborating Successfully With Academic Researchers: Findings from the Researcher-Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Enna Khondkaryan, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243911.pdf>

This 7-page brief for criminal justice practitioners provides recommendations on how to collaborate with researchers. The brief is intended to help practitioners (a) plan for future research collaborations that will function as seamlessly as possible and (b) produce findings that have significant impact on practices, policies, services, and ultimately contribute to improving advocacy and support for victims and reducing crime and recidivism.

Strategies for Successfully Developing and Disseminating Useful Products from Researcher Practitioner Collaborations, Findings from the Researcher-Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Bronwyn A. Hunter, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243913.pdf>

For state administrative agencies:

Criminal Justice System State Administrative Agencies: Research Capacity and Experience with Research Collaborations, Findings from the Researcher-Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Carolina E. Price, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243915.pdf>

The Role of State Administrative Agencies in Advancing Criminal Justice Research, Findings from the Researcher-Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Carolina E. Price, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243917.pdf>

Evidence-Based Policy and Practice: The Role of the State in Advancing Criminal Justice Research, Findings from the Researcher- Practitioner Partnerships Study (RPPS)

Author(s): Tami P. Sullivan, Bronwyn A. Hunter, Bonnie S. Fisher

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/243916.pdf>